Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Chautauqua, Literary and Scientific Circle: Graduate Course in English History and Literature To the Student: The following pages of this pamphlet contain sixteen lessons, two for each month, covering the first year s work of the special course in English History and Literature. These lessons are assigned to a period of eight months only, so that students may have ample time for reviews and for the study of recommended books, while those who begin late will be able to complete the year s work without undue haste. As in all the special courses of the C. L. S. C. there is no absolute limit of time for the completion of the work, but students arc urged to cultivate regular habits of study, and as far as possible, to finish their work within the prescribed time. Students applying for the special examinations, will receive instructions concerning this part of the work, toward the close of the year. The following general directions will enable the student to use wisely the lessons offered; 1. - Study the lesson carefully in accordance with the suggestions given, writing out in a separate note book the answers to these suggestions. 2. - At the end of each lesson close all books and do the work called for in the tests and reviews. These may be written into papers as elaborate as time affords. Local circles can also use these tests and reviews as topics for essays or discussions.
